In several cases damages have been awarded, but these are only nominal. It is expected that the improvement will be carried through without much opposition, although several property-owners are reported as objecting.

A GOOD SWIMMER DROWNED.

HE SINKS IMMEDIATELY AFTER DIVING IN THE HACKENSACK RIVER.

Hackensack, Aug. 10.—Oscar Benson, a Swede, whose home is in Harlem, visited Westview, on the east band of the Hackensack River, yesterday with his sister. In the evening a large party went bath-ing in the river to cool off before starting for home. Benson, who was said to be the best swimmer in the company, took a header from a springboard on the river bank and was instantly followed by another member of the party.

The second diver arose to the surface about twenty-five feet from the place where he disappeared, but Benson was not seen again until 7 e'clock this morning, when his body was found by John Harold. There was no mark on the body to John Harold. There was no mark on the body to indicate that the swimmer had been injured, and it is supposed that he was overcome by the sudden immersion while his body was at an exceedingly high temperature. The sister of Benson was prostrated by the death of the young man, and was unable to go to her home. Coroner Ricordo took the body to the Morgue, whence it will be removed to the home of the dead man to-day. Benson was twenty-three years old.

CHILD POISONED BY POTASH.

Gertrude, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Post, of Courtland-st., Helleville, is in a critical condition, resulting from a drink of potash water which she took on Saturday afternoon. The child's mother mixed the potash with water for use in bleaching, and left the room for a moment. In her absence the child clambered up on the table and drank greedily of the mixture. Her screams of kyony aroused her mother, who ran to her child's aid. The family physician was at once sent for, but the child is unlikely to recover.

The Board will meet again next Monday.

A CONSTABLE TURNS CIRCUS MANAGER. Constable James H. Higbie took charge of Van Amburgh's circus, in Newark, yesterday morning, and will conduct it pending the settlement of differences between the proprietors and an employe. A writ of attachment was secured by Charles De Orville, one of the performers, in the Second District Court on Saturday, alleging that Frank A. Robbins, Gilbert Robinson and the Van Amburgh circus conjointly owe him $59 for salary due and unpaid. Other employes were anxious to secure additional writs, but they were not able to pay the necessary fees. The writ secured by De Orville, is made returnable in twenty days.

HE NO LONGER DISPLAYS HIS MONEY. Passale, Aug. 10.-M. J. Van Leuween, of Passalest., a real estate dealer, has reported to the police the loss of $800. He had been carrying the money about with him in a roll. A few nights ago, he says, he placed the money on his bed with a onesundred dollar bill in the middle of the roll. then called every one in the house to see the money. He says he slept on the money that night, and that it was gone the following morning. He thinks some one entered his room from the roof of the porch and stole the money. Many people knew to had the money, as he had shown it to people in the streets.

The woman wore shees without heels, and her footmerks could be easily distinguished. The entire community became interested and joined in the search.

About 11 o'clock on Sunday morning the woman was found near Muldoon's Brook, Wickatunk, twenty miles from home, and in a starved and exhausted condition. She was clearly out of her mind, and the attending physician pronounced it a temporary derangement brought on by the extreme heat. The woman has since been in a stupor. She is thought to have been on the move almost continually for three days and nights, without having eaten anything except perhaps the berries she had picked.

THEIR INNOCENCE-THEIR SUPPOSED CONFEDERATES UNABLE TO GIVE

The examination of Dr. John Craig and William H. McClure, who were locked up in the Hudson County Jail on Sunday, on a charge of being principals in a combination of swindlers who are said to have been extremely successful in fleecing the public, were arraigned before United States Commissioner Rowe in Jersey City yesterday after noon for examination. They were represented by James J. Furey. Postal Inspector J. J. Larmour, of Chicago, told the Commissioner that he had six complaints against each of the prisoners for using the United States mail for fraudulent purposes. David King, of the Chicago Board of Trade, identified Craig and McClure, and at this point counsel for the prisoners announced that his clients would admit their identity and waive further examination. The priswere then committed for trial. States District-Attorney J. Kearney Rice requested that ball be set at $10,000 in each case, but Commis doner Rowe thought $7,000 sufficient. McClure were returned to the jail, and will be taken to Chicago to-morrow.

Craig and McClure were seen at the jail previous to the examination. Craig said: "I am a veteran of the war, and was formerly a practising physician in the West. I was forced to retire from practice on account of heart trouble. I started in the commission business in Chicago. Last winter 283 brokers, or alleged bucketshop men, were indicted in that city. The complaints were made by the Board of Trade, which does not want men outside the Board to do commission business. Of the 283 indictments only twenty were taken up, and they were thrown out of court. The complaints against McClure and myself were made by H. H. Chicago, Aug 10.-William A. Thomas, John L. Tolman and James F. McClure, who were arrested Saturday night charged with using the mails to defraud, in connection with W. H. McClure and John Craig, now under arrest at Jersey City, N. J., are still in confinement, having failed to furnish the $2.50 bonds required of each. Their examination is set for Friday next. Thomas and McClure both declare that the charges are blackmail, actuated by a desire for revenge on the part of an advertising agent of Chicago and a Kansas City lottery agent. The Civic Federation officers, however, as well as the postal inspectors, who have been working in conjunction on the case for the last six months, are confident they have ample evidence to effect the conviction of the prisoners and break up what they declare to be "the greatest swindling scheme in years." The suit brought against "Fred" Waldmann, manager of Waldmann's Theatre, Newark, to restrain him from receiving the moneys of the copartnership existing between himself, Mrs. Lena Baker, his step-mother; Luiu and Maud Waldmann and Carrie Quinn in the ownership of the theatre, and to restrain him from disposing of the same, was compromised in ar antercom in the Chancery Chambers, Jersey City, yesterday morning. All the partners were in the courtroom, and while Vice-Chancellor Stevens was disposing of other cases they entered another room and made the compromise, they entered another room and made the compromise, agreeing to adjourn the application for an injunction until September. In the mean time Waldmann is to act as manager, deal prudently with the funds, and administer the affairs of the business in a becoming manner. He will give surety, and by agreement satisfy all the demands of his stepmother.

The bill, which was returnable yesterday morning, asked for an accounting and an injunction, and set forth that Waldmann had been improperly conducting the affairs of the theatre, in that he had started a "Fred" Waldmann Specialty Company and had taken $5.500 from the funds of the copartnership to conduct the venture. The politioner also set forth that he had neglected the management of the theatre, and, finally, it was alleged that Waldmann had banked the copartnership funds in his own name, in direct violation of the agreement.

INSUBORDINATION AT CAMP BOYNTON.

TWO SOLDIERS OF THE BAPTIST BOYS' BRIGADE

DISHONORABLY DISCHARGED. Boynton Beach, Aug. 10.-The battalions of the Boys' Brigade were in their glory yesterday at Camp Boynton. Early in the day wagons were on their way toward the camp, and before noon all trains on the Central Railroad from Jersey City were carrying the parents and friends of the Christian soldiers.

There were rumors of insubordination affont throughout the day, but nothing definite could be learned, as the staff of officers were in session a headquarters. It was noticed, however, that Bat talion Drum Major Ryer and about fifteen mem bers of the Second Company, of Jersey City, had left camp, and this caused all the more talk. Adjutant Brinckerhoff read order No. 6 at dress parade last night, which was as follows:
"Private Albert Bossent, of the Fifth Company, Jersey City, has been dishonorably discharged from both the battalion and his company for insubordi-both the battalion and his company to hasher nation.

"Drum-Major George W. Ryer, of the Second Company, Jersey City, also this day has been removed from his position, and dishonorably discharged from this camp. By order of "THOMAS W. WIGHTMAN, Major."

The Second Company, of Jersey City, did not take part in the dress parade last night, as many members had left camp, and Captain Van Dyka was ill. He is suffering from the heat.

Major Wightman has a mascot, a tiger-striped cat, not as long as a pint measure. The cat came to the major's tent and was taken in and cared for. This may account for his appointment as major-general of the United Baptist Boys' Brigade of the United States. The battalions will probably break camp at noon Wednesday.

THE HAPPY ENDING OF A SCARE. Camden, Aug. 10 .- Great anxiety was caused to several families in this city last night and to-day as tweive persons were missing. Christian Lloyd, a laundryman, took his two sons and nine others out for a sail yesterday. When they did not return by midnight, it was feared they had been caught in the storm and drowned. This morning they did not appear, and it was considered almost certain they had been drowned. They returned this even-ing. They were driven on Tinicum Island by the squall of last night. No one was injured, but all had a narrow escape. The boat was floated after the squall, but the party remained becalmed all morning and until late this afternoon.

THE SCALLOP IN THE MARKETS. From The Popular Science Monthly, From The Popular Science Monthly.

In New-York markets Rhode Island scallops have a reputation for excellence that may or may not be deserved, for in that city "Oyster Bay asparagus" is a label put on almost all bunches of that vegetable as soon as the product of New-Jersey arrives; all small hard clams are "lattle Necks, although that part of Long Island does not market over 50.09 bushels in a year, and the quality of tenderness and flavor varies as it does with "Blue Point" oysters, a term now used for most small oysters, as "Saddle Rock" is for large ones, although no oysters have been taken from that rock in twenty years.

though no oysters have been taken from that rock in twenty years.

So much for a reputation; but the expert flouse-wife looks the different lots of scallops over, passes by the white ones, and buys those of a yellow that. The fact is that the meat of the scallop is naturally a faint yellow, but soaking whitens and injures it. This soaking in fresh water is done to make them swell and measure more, and it increases their bulk cy about a third until the frying-pan has done its work, when they will be found to have shrunken to less than the original size; hence it is best to avoid the white meats, if possible. It is probable that the price for the unwatered scallops would be better if all shippers would agree to stop the practice, and then all scallops would be "Rhode Islands," although marketmen say that some from that State are watered. The practice is a bad one, because it injures the sale of the meats, as may be seen by comparing

HERBERT TALKS ON SEA POWER.

AN ADDRESS BY THE SECRETARY AT THE NAVAL WAR COLLEGE.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 10.-Secretary Herbert, of the Navy Department, addressed the War College to day on the subject, "The Sea and Sea Power as a Factor in the History of the United States," The address opened with the story of the early settlers of this country, and their retreat from their native and to secure religious liberty. He said: "They set tled near the sea, and it was the sea, there which the American colonies were largely indebted for the measure of self-government that they enjoyed, even when not yet ready to assert their com

the War of the Rebeilion, Mr. Herbert said:

Who shall estimate the value to the United States of the services of its Navy, which isolated the Confederacy. Had the Confederacy, instead of the United States, been able to exercise dominion over the seas, send its cotton abroad and to bring back the supplies, it is not too much to say that the outcome of the Civil War would have been reversed. The situation as it was during the Civil War may be, to some extent, repeated in the future in a war with a foreign naval power. The sea coust over which the Confederacy was annoyed and attacked is still the sea coast of the United States, and added to that is the coast from Maine to Cape Henry and from Puget Sound to the Gulf of California. All this is assailable in the future, and all this is assailable in the future, and all this is assailable in the future, and all this is to be defended by the United States.

It is not at all likely that any foreign country could with success invade the interior of our country, but we are still vulnerable from the sea. Our ports can be blockaded, our commerce can be destroyed, we can be isolated from the world, our flag can be hustilled and trailed.

A BOY WHO RIDES A TURTLE.

From The Philadelphia Inquirer.

Among the visitors to Philadelphia yesterday weal John Raines, of New-York, who sells clothing in the South. John usually has a good story to tell, and the last trip furnished him his best. "When in Tampa, Fla." he said, "I had to take a buggy ride to visit some country customers, and going along the road I overtook the most singular mode of locomotion I ever saw. A half-grown boy was riding a huge sea turtle. It is not uncommon in Florida for the big green turtles to grow to an immense size, and this one would probably measure five feet across the back. He had wandered too far on the beach and, his passage to the ocean intercepted with a rail, the boy succeeded in threving him on his back, and then it was easy to get him in a wagon and take him home. The captor contrived a harness which fastened tightly around the neck of the rentile. A turtle will travel in the direction his head in pointed, and the matter of guidling him was, therefore, far from difficult. The boy sat on the turtle, with his feet foided under him, tailor fashion, and while a horse or bicycle might make better time, neither would be more comfortable. These turtles are very strong and a considerable load could be packed on his back and he would draw it. If he showed a disposition to stop or balk, a prod in the fleshy part of his less with a pointed stick the boy carried with him for that purpose never failed to start him up. HARMLESS JERSEY SNAKES. Toms River (N. J.) correspondent of The Philadel-phila Record. phia Record.

Perhaps the strangest of all industries in Jersey is that of snake catching, the headquarters of which are at Whitings, a hamlet of a dozen houses, at the junction of the New-Jersey Central, Pennsylvania and Tuckerton railroads. Since the opening of warm weather not a day has gone by that the station agent has not been called on to forward a wooden box punctured with auger holes and labelled "snakes."

The serpents are of the pine snake variety, which frequently grow to be six or eight feet long, and are shipped to Warner Hargroves, at Brown's Mills, who pays the snake catchers at the rate of 15 cents per foot for the reptiles they deliver to him.

what Hargroves does with the snakes is a mystery to the "piners" who ship them, but they care little for that so long as he remits promptly for every shipment. It is said that he in turn ships them to a New-York doctor, where they are used by him as "medicine." The harmless pine snake, which, despite its hideous looks, can be safely handled by any child, probably turns up in side-show, circus and museum as a deadly constrictor.

SHE BELIEVED IN PLAIN SPEAKING. From The Buffalo Express.

"So you're the Eccentric Young Man," observed the farmer's wife in a tone that would slit a grind-stone; "you're walking across the continent on a wager, and you rely on people along the route for entertainment, do you".

"Yes, madam, and if you will kindly roast a chick". Seems to me there's something reminiscent about your talk. I have heard language very much like that before. But the men who sung that song didn't call themselves any fancy names; they were just plain, oyster-can Willies. It would be much better for you, young fellow, if you had joined the union, for if you had you would have noticed a mark on the gate post, which stands for a husky woman and a big building; gin this place the go-by. No, I don't think I will encourage any aesthetic itinerants to-day."
